He saith, also, that about ten days past they had another great storm with a mist, by which storm they were again severed, so as of these 27 sail there came into the coast of Dingle-i-couch but the admiral,1 another ship of 400 ton, and a bark about 40 ton; and what is become of the rest of those 27 sail he knows not, but of one great hulk of 400 ton, which was so spoiled as she cast towards the shore about 20 leagues from Dingle-i-couch. He knoweth not who was captain of this hulk. He saith that, of all sorts, there be now remaining in the admiral near about 500 men, of which there be 25 Basques2 and 40 Portingals which are mariners; the master being very sick, and one of the pilots. He saith there be 800 soldiers and 20 of the...
