Excerpt: . . . 9 While delegation of regulatory responsibilities to a sole single regulator might well avoid some of the problems cited in the SECs concept release, the consequence of following this approach would be to destroy one of the major advantages of self-regulation. There are other choices for regulation. There are better ways to reduce duplicative costs and inefficiencies from multiple SROs. We are intrigued by the approach of the SIA, which would consolidate regulation and members into a single SRO but leaving regulation of trading to each individual market. The SIAs proposal is designed to eliminate duplication by regulation of multiple SROs at the level where such regulation overlaps but maintain specialized regulation at the trading level where it is most needed. While the SIA approach is one way of achieving greater efficiencies, there are other alternatives which SROs can and do utilize. One approach is the use of SEC Rule 17D2 agreements, which are used by SROs to allocate regulatory responsibility with respect to common members. Another alternative that has great potential at eliminating duplication and increasing efficiency and enhancing overall quality of regulation is the use of a national market system plan to conduct regulatory functions that are common among SROs. For example, five U. S. options exchanges recently filed with the Commission a proposed options regulatory surveillance authority, which we call ORSA. The purpose of this plan is to enable the five exchanges to act jointly with respect...
