Excerpt: . . . for defendant in error, quoted in the opinion, that such evidence be considered in the record does not, in my judgment, foreclose the question as to whether the county would or would not have purchased the land if the offer to sell had not been withdrawn. That language is contained in the brief presented to this court upon the first review of the case, and was upon the theory, that irrespective of that question, under the decision of the trial court, the rights of plaintiff in error were not injuriously affected. Moreover, the suggestion that such evidence be considered in the record was not accepted by this court at that time, and the matter was left open for further inquiry and future determination. Under the law of the case as established by Du Bois v. Bowles et al., supra, I think the amendment...
